This report outlines and analyses 14,615 English, Malay, and Tagalog-language accounts on Twitter, Facebook, Discord, Telegram, and Instagram associated with radical right politics posted online by far-right activists, alt-right communities, and those who, actively or passively, support their extreme ideology of nationalism, cultural, and religious conservatism in Maritime Southeast Asia.

Radical right communities across Maritime Southeast Asia are active online and reactive towards political events.

Five key themes from these communities' discussions have been identified: civilisation, economics, politics, religion and the social fabric.

Two of the three movements studied for this report have demonstrated their use of targeted harassment tactics via trolling and swarming.

In total, this report identified 14,615 messages containing keywords associated with antisemitism, cultural imperialism and historical revisionism, among others.

Three types of radical right communities were identified, all of which demonstrated preference divergence for certain social media platforms due to their own political objectives and operational security.
